From the Delta College 1973-'74 Student Handbook

I appreciate the opportunity to address a statement to the students of Delta College. My comments are a part of a rather basic philosophical statement that I have made frequently in the past.

While it is all too often not true, the world of education should be very much a part of our society—not separate or distinct from it. Education can no longer afford, nor has it been able to for several years, to be an ivory tower. All segments of education—faculty, students, and administration—have a responsibility to see that the results of education are constructive and not destructive of the basic purposes of education itself and our society. Education is not a closed system. It is not complete. It is not perfect. No truly educated individual has ever thought so or ever will. As a part of the educational world, Delta College is not a closed system, not complete, not perfect. We, therefore, have a responsibility to work continually toward the ideal.

As a student you have a much broader responsibility than simply sitting in the classroom and absorbing whatever is placed before you. You are now a college student, and, as a part of higher education, you will be expected to contribute to the development and continuing growth of Delta College. In return, Delta College, its faculty and staff will contribute to you.

Education provides you with a unique experience and opportunity. It will be one of the few times in your life, if not the only time, in which you will gain immediately in direct proportion to your own investment. But even more significant is the fact that you provide yourself with not only an immediate return, but also a long-range potential of almost unlimited individual growth and development. Take advantage of this opportunity to your fullest.

Sincerely,
